

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The APEC Voices of the Future was officially launched by His Excellency Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad, The Honourable Prime Minister of Malaysia in 1998 during the APEC Leaders' Meeting hosted by Malaysia.

Since its inaugural launch in Kuala Lumpur, the APEC Voices of the Future Program is held in conjunction with the APEC Leaders' Week and has grown from a humble beginning of 30 university students to more than 130 young leaders at the annual APEC Summit.

The Virtual Trade Mission Foundation International based in Washington DC played a prominent role in the annual APEC Voices Program since its inception in 1998 and the National Youth Achievement Award of Singapore helped to strengthen the program in 2009 when Singapore hosted the APEC Leaders' Week.

Today, the APEC Voices of the Future Program is recognized as an official Youth Program endorsed by the APEC Secretariat and held in conjunction with the APEC Leaders' Week, providing the opportunity and platform for young leaders and educators from the 21 APEC Economies to attend the ABAC Meetings and the APEC CEO Summit.

“One day, in the not-too-distant future, your generation will be called upon to take up the mantle of promoting a stronger regional economy among APEC member nations. I encourage you to get to know your fellow Voices of the Future delegates. Together, you will be responsible for shaping the future of our global economy.”

Through their engagement and participation in the APEC Voices process, APEC Voices young leaders are given the rare opportunity to engage in dialogues with key policymakers and business leaders on policies and issues that affect the younger generation in the Asia-Pacific Region.

The annual APEC Voices program is organized and operated in cooperation with the APEC Secretariat, APEC Host Committee, ABAC and APEC CEO Host Committee. Following the principles of consensus and flexibility, which guide APEC, each year, the APEC Voices Leadership Council works with all these offices and officials to plan the annual APEC Voices program in the way that works and enhances the APEC Host Economy and the supporting organizations, events and venues, while providing an APEC-engaged learning experience for our students and educators.

In 2011, during the APEC Leaders' Week in Honolulu, Hawaii, the U.S. Under-Secretary of Commerce for International Trade, H.E. Francisco J. Sanchez officially launched the June Mayne Gould Leadership Award. At the annual APEC Voices event, an outstanding youth will be selected for the June Mayne Gould Leadership Award and be awarded a scholarship to serve in the working committee of the following year's APEC Voices Program.

After each APEC Voices conference, young leaders will present the APEC Leaders with a Youth Declaration, which explored the challenges and offer solutions for consideration. Youth representatives will return to their respective economies and conduct sharing in schools on their experiences and insights about promoting free trade and economic cooperation in support of sustainable economic growth and prosperity for the Asia-Pacific region.

Currently, more than 3,000 Members of the APEC Voices Alumni are still very much in touch with each other. Many of the members are successful young business leaders in their own right while many others are working with various APEC Member Economies government ministries and agencies. They also serve as mentors to help develop the next generation of the APEC Voices of the Future participants.

APEC Voices Leadership Council received very encouraging feedback from both government as well as the business communities as we move forward to prepare the next APEC Voices Program with the Host Economies.

“The host government plays an important role in providing opportunities and platforms for the development of our next generation of leaders in all sectors, be it in finance, business or civil service.

The exposure gained by our young leaders from such high-level events will help them widen their international understanding and network for the future. Most importantly, it will lay a strong foundation for their development.”
